

Gary Jalbert

Chief Executive Officer

Gary Jalbert is a highly accomplished executive who has optimized profitability across diverse operating environments within the food, beverage, and consumer goods industries throughout his career.

Before becoming the chief executive officer at Lyman, Jalbert was the CEO and president of Lamson Products, in Westfield, Mass. The oldest cutlery manufacturer in the United States, Lamson was founded in 1837 and sells fine handcrafted cutlery. Before Lamson, Jalbert was chief operating officer and vice president of sales for Uncle Harry's, Inc. His earlier career includes working for Steak-Umm and Carvel Ice Cream.

He received a masters in business administration from the McCallum Graduate School of Business at Bentley University in Mass, and Gary also holds a bachelor of science degree in business management from Fitchburg State College in Fitchburg, Mass.

He has held board positions on two economic development councils in Tolland, and he frequently volunteers for events that support Project Graduation, a program offered by high schools throughout the U.S., in which organized, adult-supervised and alcohol-free activities are offered as part of post-graduation parties, as an alternative to events involving alcoholic beverages or drugs.

Along with his wife Karen, Gary and their three sons have lived in Tolland, Conn. for 20 years. A native New Englander, he and his family love and enjoy spending time in the outdoors. Among his favorite pastimes include golf, snowboarding (he spent a season as a snowboard instructor at Okemo Mountain Resort in Vermont), and recreating with his family and their two rescue dogs.